I love the idea of meeting a cat that frequents a bookshop or going into an office and finding a cat sat on the reception desk*, or perhaps spotting a cat curled up on a chair in an old country house. There's something charmingly eccentric about the thought. College Cats is this in book form. Oxford and Cambridge are, I think, quite commonly

Hertford College is a constituent college of the University of Oxford in England. It is located on Catte Street in the centre of Oxford, directly opposite the main gate to the Bodleian Library. The college is known for its iconic bridge, the Bridge of Sighs. There are around 600 students at the college at any one time, comprising undergraduates, graduates and visiting students from overseas. The first Hertford College began in the 1280s as Hart Hall and became a college in 1740 but was dissolved

St Catherine's College redefines Oxford and is committed to access for all. St Catherine's can trace its roots back to 1868, when a 'Delegacy for Unattached Students' formed. This delegacy enabled students to be members of the University without being a member of a college, thus avoiding the prohibitive costs of an Oxford college.
